1. WHAT A CUSTOMER ACTUALLY SEES

This is your Google Maps listing, read the way a first-time customer reads it on a phone. Every line was observed on the live listing on 7 October 2026 and can be re-checked at the link in the footer.

FIELD	STATUS	WHAT THE CUSTOMER GETS
Listing claimed	Claimed	You control this listing. This is the hard part and it is already done.
Phone number	Present	A contact number shows on the listing, so a customer who needs a part can call you.
Opening hours	Present	The listing shows that you are open 24 hours.
Website / link	Missing	Google displays the "Add website" prompt. There is no link out to stock, brands or pricing.
Instagram / social link	None	No Instagram, Facebook or catalogue link on the listing.

2. THE GAP, STATED PLAINLY

A car owner with a broken part searches on their phone, finds your listing, and sees a name and a number. For a spare-parts shop that is the entire decision, and it is not enough. They do not know whether you stock their make, whether you have the part today, or whether you are worth the drive to Opebi. The shops they are comparing you against are on the same screen.

The one-line version: a customer with a broken car will call whoever they believe has the part. Your listing gives them no reason to believe it is you. One link changes that.

3. FIRST THREE FIXES, IN ORDER

Fix 1 — Put a link on the listing
Open the listing in Google Maps, choose "Add website", and paste a link. A one-page list of the makes you cover and how to reach you is enough to start. About ten minutes.

Fix 2 — Add photos of stock and the shopfront
Upload shelves, the counter and the entrance so a customer recognises the place from the road and can see you actually carry stock. Spare-parts buyers judge a shop on what they can see. You can do this from your phone.

Fix 3 — Ask buyers for reviews

The listing has a "Write a review" button. Ask customers who found the right part to leave an honest review. Reviews are one of the signals Google uses to decide who appears first in local search, and they compound.

4. WHAT THIS IS WORTH TO YOU

A spare-parts customer who is treated well comes back for the next part, and tells other drivers. The listing you already own is free and it is currently the weakest version of itself. Fix 1 costs ten minutes. Fixes 2 and 3 cost nothing but an afternoon.

There is no charge for this audit and no obligation. If you would rather have someone do the three fixes with you than read about them, that is what we do — Google Business Profile setup from ₦15,000.
